To the very large number of officials of the Indian Public Services to whom the house of Thresher & Glenny is so familiar as a Strand landmark, the existence of a Branch establishment in the West End may cause surprise. The necessity for this was dictated by the demand of our tailoring department for increased accommodation and the greater convenience of customers.

The old traditions of the Strand house are fully maintained, particularly the combination of a thoroughly efficient service and reasonable prices, always associated with our name. In respect of Tailoring the immediate requirements of gentlemen arriving in London on leave can be satisfied with equal facility at either house, but shirts, underwear and general hosiery are supplied only from the Strand.
